Hospice Care: ‘A Road Map for the Family’
I love scrapbooking! This simple activity affords me the opportunity to spend highly coveted time with dear friends, showcase the wee bit of creativity that I inherited and, because I am so very behind in putting pictures to paper, I am able to re-live precious memories and joy-filled celebrations.

In recent days, due to our much-anticipated expansion of Dove House, we have been decluttering and organizing closets and storerooms. It is amazing what accumulates over time! Just like a family might, we found pictures of our younger days, with volunteer activities, staff celebrations and organizational accomplishments captured in treasured photos and mementos. These are reminders of the vision, commitment and generosity of the many volunteers, community members and associates who worked diligently to build the Carroll Hospice that we know today.

I am proud to be a part of an organization that has such a strong history of excellence and a well-earned reputation for meeting the needs of the community. As we continue to grow, you can be confident we will continue to provide the quality end-of-life care for which we are known. And, in the process, we are poised to create many more memories in the years to come.

Do what you love, love what you do! Happy Spring!

Regina Shannon Bodnar, R.N.
Executive Director, Carroll Hospice
John Middleton, M.D., Joins as Full-Time Medical Director

When John Middleton, M.D., joined Carroll Hospice in November 2016, he split his time between guiding our mission and caring for his own patients at his Carroll County family medicine practice. Now, after 35 years as a primary care provider, Dr. Middleton is retiring from his practice to become Carroll Hospice’s first full-time medical director.

“As a family doctor, I had to wear a lot of different hats—from pediatrician to internist,” says Dr. Middleton. “The training that I had was so unique. It puts me at a place where I’m able to look at the entire patient, their needs and their family’s needs. I’ve really learned that the health of one of us affects the entire family and even the community as a whole.”

Long-term and hospice care have always been a passion for Dr. Middleton. He believes that caring for an individual through the end of his or her life is a privilege, and he wants to celebrate the lives of his patients with their families.

“Hospice care wraps its arms around an entire family,” he explains. “Getting people to recognize that we’re celebrating someone’s life, not dreading their death, is a very beautiful and uplifting experience. If we focus on the meaning of that person’s life, what that person meant to every individual that’s a part of their life, we get a whole different view of hospice care.”

While he looks forward to transitioning to a full-time role with Carroll Hospice, this change means leaving his family medicine practice that he established in 1983. But it’s his admiration for the Carroll Hospice staff and volunteers that makes him confident it’s the right move.

“It is a tough decision to retire from my practice after 35 years,” says Dr. Middleton. “But hospice is a calling, it’s not a job. The people who involve themselves with hospice are very special, and I am so proud to be part of that team.”

We Honor Veterans Breakfast

Carroll Hospice honored and thanked veterans for their service to our country during its annual We Honor Veterans breakfast in November, sponsored by Koons Toyota Westminster.

“Carroll Hospice hosts the veterans breakfast, first and foremost, to honor our veterans and recognize them for their service to our country,” said Carroll Hospice volunteer coordinator Kim Benson. “It is also a wonderful way to support our We Honor Veterans program mission and introduce our guests to wonderful and inspirational speakers.”

Janice Chance, president and chaplain of the Gold Star Mothers, Maryland Chapter, spoke to the crowd of more than 120 veterans and their guests. Her son, Marine Captain Jesse Melton III, was killed in action in Afghanistan in September 2008.

“Jesse was my quiet storm—a servant leader, a man of integrity, a man of honor, an outstanding officer and a gentleman. Simply put, he was my family’s hero,” she said.

James Mingle, a Carroll Hospice chaplain and Air Force veteran, said the breakfast was emotional and touching. “There’s truth in the saying that freedom isn’t free,” he said.

Lee and Louna Primm have turned to Carroll Hospice during some of the toughest times in their lives.

Through their support and volunteerism at Carroll Hospital, the couple was familiar with Carroll Hospice, and they experienced the loving support hospice provides when the team cared for several close family members.

After Lee’s 95-year-old mother Thelma sustained a minor injury in 2008, her systems started to shut down, and the Primms knew it was time for hospice care.

Thelma was transferred to Dove House, Carroll Hospice’s inpatient facility, and was there for less than two days before she died.

The experience was peaceful and respectful, says Louna. For Lee, the ability to be there for his mother, visit with her and say goodbye made all the difference. “It made it easy for my mother,” he says, “but it also made it easy on my family.”

Thelma, the oldest of 10 children, was a spiritual, happy woman who was devoted to the family, says Lee.

Thelma’s youngest sibling was Lee’s aunt, Jessie. The Primms moved Jessie to Carroll Lutheran Village about 13 years ago, when she was living alone and facing significant health issues. In November 2017, her body wasn’t responding to medical care. After being evaluated by hospice staff, Jessie entered into hospice care at Carroll Lutheran Village for several months until her death in February 2018 at the age of 88.

“I was told by the hospice nurse that she was within hours of passing, so I was able to be there with her, and I was until the moment she died,” says Lee.

The Methodist church was an important part of Jessie’s life. “She knew, by heart, every hymn in the Methodist hymnal,” he remembers. Carroll Hospice and Carroll Lutheran Village staff knew how important music and the church were to Jessie, and they made sure to have music playing non-stop. “The music was on when she passed,” Lee remembers.

He remembers his aunt as a religious woman who traveled extensively and loved to see new things. “Her signature was her eternal happiness,” says Lee. “There was never a down time for her.”

Shortly before Jessie died, Louna’s mother, Rose Rivera, also entered into hospice care at Carroll Lutheran Village. She’d been an independent living resident there for almost a decade before a fall caused her to become bedridden in 2016. Rose was experiencing a lot of pain in her back and her legs that was difficult to control. Not sure where to turn, Louna reached out to hospice and asked them to assess her mother. In January 2018, Rose entered into hospice care.

“There was always an open dialogue between the Carroll Hospice staff and the Carroll Lutheran staff,” Louna says. Hospice staff worked to adjust Rose’s medications to help with her pain, and she became peaceful and relieved. She died about six months after starting hospice care, two months shy of her 96th birthday.

Louna remembers her mother as a very intelligent, determined woman who came from an Italian immigrant family and put herself through the nursing program at Fordham University by working nights in a factory. Rose was a private, quiet lady who loved children. “As a daughter, there were never any limits placed on my brother, sister and I. We could be whatever we wanted to be, and that was pretty brave, but she had done it for herself,” Louna says.

With each loved one’s care, the hospice team provided information on her progress and education on the steps of the dying process to ensure the family was fully informed. “[Hospice is] comfort and care, that’s the biggest thing,” says Louna. “It’s a road map for the family, as well as the patient.”

Their experiences taught them the importance of getting into hospice care as early as possible. “It makes a big difference in those months if you have care early, both for the patient and the family,” says Lee.

He believes that denial could be one of the biggest reasons why people don’t reach out to hospice sooner. “I think they’re afraid that it’s an admission that the end is upon them,” Lee says. “But if you’re questioning [whether hospice care is needed], make that inquiry.”

Tastefully Tempting for Two Decades: Taste of Carroll Marks 20 Years

Taste of Carroll started as a modest idea, as many of the best ones do—a fundraiser featuring food from local establishments to raise money for hospice services.

And, in the past 20 years, it has steadily grown in popularity. While the venue and the format has shifted as it has evolved through the years, the purpose of this event has remained the same: to raise funds for continued unparalleled hospice care in Carroll County and the surrounding communities.

Today, Taste of Carroll is Carroll Hospice’s premier fundraising event and has raised nearly $2 million since its start in 1999.

The need for hospice care in our area grows each year, says Robbin Nolen, chair of this year’s event. “Personally, I have seen what hospice can do for patients and their families,” she says. “It’s comforting to see the relief in a family when they know Carroll Hospice is there to help at such a delicate time.”

Monies raised from the event are used for the uncompensated care that Carroll Hospice provides, including end-of-life care costs not covered by a patient’s insurance and the vast array of bereavement services offered to patients’ families and the community at large.

“Many services offered by Carroll Hospice are not reimbursed by insurance companies, which is why Taste of Carroll is so important,” says Nolen. “We need to continue to serve our community with the programs Carroll Hospice offers, like care at the Dove House inpatient facility, Camp T.R., veterans’ events and bereavement support.”

Join us as we celebrate 20 delectable years of raising funds for hospice care. This year’s theme is the Roaring ’20s, of course, and we aim to raise $220,000. We look forward to celebrating with you, Gatsby style, Monday, April 29, 2019!

A special thanks to our lead sponsors—including Presenting Sponsor BB&T, Market Sponsor CareFirst and Epicurean Sponsor Koons Toyota Westminster—for their support of this important event.
All support groups are free and are offered at Carroll Hospice, 292 Stoner Ave., Westminster, unless otherwise noted. For more information, call 410-871-7656 or visit CarrollHospice.org
